Dedication

Mrs. Nowland, you have cooked faithfully at Erskine for many years, and we appreciate all that you have done for us each day around noon, as well as many other times. You have helped our class in many other ways besides at lunchtime. You have never failed to buy a raffle ticket, a box of candy, or to help us with our activities.

You are a marvelous person and we will never forget you. Thus, we dedicate our yearbook to you, but it is only a small part of our gratitude and appreciation.

In Memory of

The Senior Class has saved this portion of the Pinnacle in memory of its classmate Gerald B. Stimpson, who was killed in an automobile accident in July of 1963.

Jerry was a wonderful guy and had many friends. His ambition was to go to college and major in the science field. In his two years at Erskine, he participated in band, enjoyed sports and took part in various committees.

Many times we have thought of Jerry and are very sorry that he is not here with us to share in our happiness. On graduation day, we will feel that a part of us, the 1965 senior class of Erskine Academy, is missing.

In Appreciation

Parents:

We, your sons and daughters, are now Seniors about to take a step out into the big world alone. We are able to take this step with confidence because you have prepared us, you have protected us, you have encouraged us.

We can only begin to thank you for all that you have done for us throughout our lives. When we were sick, it was you we wanted to be with; when we were happy, it was you with whom we wanted to share our happiness.

You have sacrificed much for our happiness and education. Many times you have carried us here and there before we got our licenses, then you told us to "be careful," "be home early." Why? Because you loved us, you cared for us.

We appreciate all that you have done for us, no one has done more.

____ Your sons and daughters

Principal's Message

As the school year draws to a close there is always a feeling of happiness and sadness - a feeling of determination and expectation - and many other mixed emotions.

You underclassmen will be looking forward to the day when you will graduate, wondering if your grades are high enough to admit you to college or if your achievement is good enough to insure your success as a secretary or some other specialized work. This should be a sobering thought for you, as competition is becoming so keen in all fields that only the better ones are selected. You who are wise enough, to take advantage of your years of free education, by working hard and applying yourselves will find success in your jobs and in your colleges. We hope and pray that you underclassmen will be aware of the wonderful opportunities ahead of you if you work hard and learn as much as possible before you graduate.

Seniors, when you receive this yearbook you will have gone through the corridor of free education and are now to open the door to a variety of new experiences.

Those of you who are continuing your education will soon be aware that success in college will be entirely up to you, and the cost of education will not seem so great if you study hard and do a good job. The sacrifices that your parents have made throughout your twelve years of schooling and the sacrifices they will continue to make to further your education, is a debt that you will never be able to repay; but be forever grateful to those who have helped you make the grade.

You seniors, who are about to enter this great world of competition, should never sell yourselves short. Victor Hugo once stated, "People do not lack strength as much as they lack will." Remember, that success comes from hard work, self confidence and strong desire. In most cases, success is not a question of ability, but a question of resolution. May God bless you in your efforts, and may your paths into life's activities be smoother because of the preparation you have received at Erskine Academy.

LIKENESS

Three small flowers
Waving in the breeze
Stop and think a moment
What will happen when they freeze?

They wither up and bend
No longer full of color and song
Now, no one cares
They'll be gone so long.

But what really happens,
Where do they go,
What are they doing
Way under the ground so low.

Aren't they really a bit like us?
When we have our problems ever so deep
Don't we fall under a blanket
And think there's nothing but sleep?

And then, all of a sudden
Arise after a while
Just like the small rows of flowers
Coming up in single file.

And when we awaken
Don't we sort of understand
That everything isn't so bad
After all, isn't life sort of grand?

Just like the little flowers
Awakening from the winter blanket in the spring
Blooming and bringing forth the beauty
That makes us all want to sing.

ERSKINE'S FACULTY

Mr. Ricker teaches history,
How he remembers so much is a mystery.

Mr. Muder is our friend,
Who brings our troubles to an end.
His rock collection is a treasure;
It brings our Mr. Winsor pleasure!
In Mr. Bunker's chemistry class,
He puts Arizona first and last.

Mrs. Plummer I've understood
Has a favorite expression, "Very good!"

Mr. Thurston, with his x's and y's,
Puts a little more algebra in all our lives.

Attention Room M, give us the facts,
Is Mr. Plummer that relaxed!

Sure of his math is Mr. Quirion,
But at the games he's always worrying!

Mrs. Salmon is of the English Department;
In literature, she expresses real sentiment.

Mr. Bradeen in his office work,
Knows those who do and those who shirk!

Mrs. Bunker, give us a break,
Don't make us sample the things we bake!

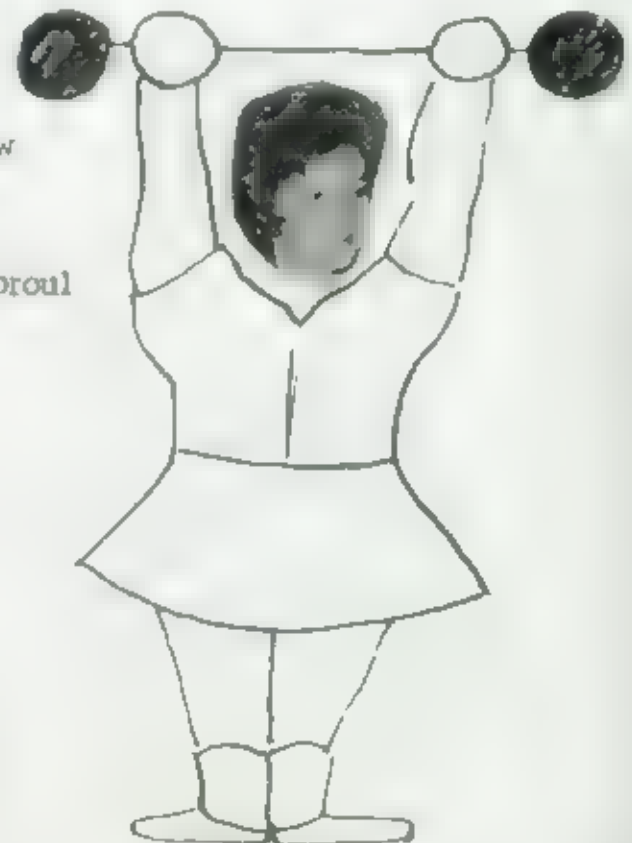

Three cheers for Miss Erskine's squad
For winning another typing award!

With the assignments we get from Mrs. Austin,
We think we're in some big college in Boston.

In biology class, Mr. Coleman can show
What makes you tick. Go! Man, go!

CLASSES

Class of 1965
Erskine Academy
South China, Maine

May, 1965

Underclassmen:

We, the 1965 senior class of Erskine Academy, have now completed four successful years at Erskine. The past four years have passed by very quickly, yet we believe that we have obtained much in mind and body.

As we look back over the past, we have many memories. We worried over meeting deadlines, passing exams, making the right play in sports, or saying the correct line in dramas.

Our freshman year was quite different from our grammar school days with different subjects, teachers, and many classmates to meet and become friends with. Freshman Day will always be remembered as embarrassing, having to perform stunts before a large audience. Mid-year exams were a lot more than we had expected, but we made it. By the time we became sophomores we were well adjusted to high school life. Through outside activities, we have come to know our classmates and you better. Our junior year was full of many activities such as the Winter Carnival, Junior-Senior Prom and the Junior Journal. Many of us made the varsity squad in football, basketball, baseball, softball, or cheering.

Now, we are in our last year of high school. Graduation is drawing near, and with it the sorrow of the parting of friends. We will no longer "be" a part of Erskine, we will have "been" a part of Erskine. Yet, we have many wonderful moments and memories to look back upon, and they will always be cherished within our hearts.

Some of us wish that we had studied harder, been in more activities, gotten to know our classmates better, but now it is too late. We did not take advantage of our opportunities. We want you to realize your many opportunities in high school and take advantage of them.

Before us lies the world with all its opportunities. Many of us have chosen college for the next two or four years, others a job, marriage, some are still undecided. We feel that we have "much" behind us, but "more" before us.

Yes, underclassmen, we are leaving Erskine, going to another world, our childhood is over, we must be on our own, make our own decisions. We wish you success and happiness in your following years at Erskine and after. May our friendships last forever.

SCHOOL SPIRIT AT ERSKINE

What is meant by this phrase "school spirit" anyway? I believe it is when the students of our school are showing a good example of the school they represent.

One very good time to show school spirit is at a basketball game when your side is losing. I think the cheerleaders did this especially well at the last game I attended. We were losing by twenty points, but this mere little factor didn't seem to enter their minds. There were smiles on the faces of every one of the girls. They cheered our side well as continuous yells were coming from them all. The girls, I think, showed very good school spirit.

Another time that school spirit can be put to a test is when a new student comes to our school. For the new student the kids at our school may seem very distant compared to the members of the school he left. If each of us showed some school spirit and said hello to the pupil, his first day might seem a real success.

Here at Erskine Academy I think we show a great deal of school spirit. Perhaps, though, with a little more effort we could show a lot more.

ERSKINE

Erskine Academy in South China, Maine,
Has some students of high caliber and some of low range.
Some are shy and quiet;
Others are boisterous and loud;
These are the typical kind you could pick out of a crowd.

Then, take the teachers whom we point to with pride
They've taken our behavior in their everyday stride
And they really seem to want to help us.
These teachers mark our papers with quickness and care
But I must admit they sometimes mark answers wrong when they're not even there.

Don't forget this building, both sturdy and strong.
It's seen a few do-gooders and many a wrong.
School isn't too bad, I guess.
It has provided some purposes I can't even mention
And in Room 3 it has provided us a place to learn another declension.

Pat Conlogue

MAINE, THROUGH THE FOUR SEASONS

When you drive through the country side, stop now and then to appreciate the grandeur and beauty that is offered to you! Maine is one of the few states that has such beauty to offer to its citizens in all the seasons. Yes, Maine is a beautiful state, from spring to autumn, and from summer to winter. Stop, relax, and enjoy the beauty that will spread before you!

The dawn is breaking on a bright and calm day. The snow slowly begins to melt and to run down the slopes to streams that will carry it on its eventful way to the sea. The air is fresh and the wind blows softly from out of the southeast, bringing with it the first robins of the new year. The blossoms are swollen on the branches, and it is time to begin the collecting of maple syrup. Although spring has arrived in the valleys, it has not yet touched the mountains. People crowd the slopes for the purpose of getting in some of the best skiing of the year.

The wind blows gently over the field of green oats, telling all that summer has arrived. Many are already starting their haying season. The mountains, covered with wild flowers and swift running streams, act as a mecca to the inflow of summer visitors. People crowd the beaches, resting on their well earned vacations. This is a season for one to sit down and relax.

The geese are heading south and the trees are hued in many colors, anything from deep purples to bright yellows. The summer vacationers have left the beaches and their cottages along the lakes. Maine becomes a different place, a land of gorgeous color, a little heaven, all its own. The guns of hunters blare in the woods beside the fields where the last harvest of the year is taking place. Autumn is loved by almost all, but all are wary of what is to come.

The temperature drops below freezing, and the children head to the lake to get in some much awaited skating. Winter is here although the first snows of the year have not yet arrived. Snow has been arriving later recently, but it stays on longer into the year. Now is the time to erect your feeding station, for the birds of the wild will soon be in need of it.

No matter what you like to do, in its four wonderful seasons of the year, Maine has something to offer to almost everyone. So, enjoy it while you are young and still able to do so!

MOTHER SAID THERE'D BE DAYS LIKE THIS!

True, Mother did say there'd be days like this. She didn't, however, say there'd be this many. My, I thought this would be a lovely day. Pictures would be taken so I'd wear my new blouse and my jumper. If I were lucky, I'd have to leave class during my English test. All these ideas seemed wonderful this morning, but, oh, if I had known this morning what I know tonight. Why did I ever bother to get up?

Yes, this morning started absolutely perfect. At least that's the way it was at 6 o'clock. At 10 o'clock I would have reported an altogether different story. You were correct in assuming I wore my new blouse with my jumper. You were also correct in assuming I was going to be photographed. The next incident you are wondering is, did I get out of my English test. Indeed I did. Not, however, because of pictures. I was merely asking the girl next to me if she had an eraser. She did, and I might just as well have used it to erase my entire paper for the teacher was positively sure I had been talking about the test. That's how I was excused from that class . . . not only for that day but for the rest of the week.

Thank goodness, the next period was study hall. I thought I could relax here. I could provided I relax twice as long in detention. Oh, those teachers, don't they ever think of anything but work? Mrs. Huxley is either saying "Stop talking," "Sit down," or "Report to detention Monday night." Can I help it if I dozed for five minutes? Whenever a person so much as lays a pencil down in that study hall, he's in for it.

That class ended only to find me in the middle of another one . . . the last. I'd make it through this one in one piece provided I watch myself carefully. When I say provided that's exactly what I mean. I should have been more careful when I passed that note. Mr. Thurston has the sharpest eyes this side of Honolulu. I was given strict orders to report to him immediately at the close of school.

Home at last. For a while I wondered if I'd arrive before nine tonight. I'm positive nothing else could happen today . . . OH! The potatoes . . . why didn't I watch them more closely? This is the fourth night in a row that I've burned them.

BASKETBALL

Five boys on each side
Have eight minutes of fun,
They toss a ball around,
Steal it and run.

They throw it down;
But it bounces right back.
They toss it into a net,
Then two points they lack.

They try the net on the other side;
But just like before,
The ball does not abide
So they try it once more.

They add up the tries
Cause the people who came,
Know the one with the most
Wins the basketball game.

Growth

Do you know of what an athlete is made? If I were going to build an athlete, first I would take the body of a sturdy built man, and give him ability which would place him at the top; next I would give him determination unforeseen by anyone. He would have the quickness to think and react that would compare to no human alive, but above all he would have the spirit of sportsmanship. No matter how much ability, determination, or quickness to react, no athlete is a true athlete without this spirit.

The dictionary gives the definition of an athlete as one having the qualities or conduct of a good sportsman, especially one who insists on fair play accompanied by the capacity to exult in victory or to whine in defeat.

To me, sportsmanship, however, is not just an insistence on fair play or the winning or the losing of a game, but it is the power which helps me to control my moods; such as anger, joy, confidence, and to have the will to win, and to overcome them. Emotions are much like the cigarette, if one indulges in them one will never be able to control them. But if one can break this habit of indulgence, he will be a happier person.

Good or bad sportsmanship affects everyone. If an athlete does not conduct himself properly his conduct affects the spectators as well as his teammates and himself. It causes the spectators to despise him whether he is a good or bad player. When the spectators despise a player, they do not attend the games and come to dislike even the sport itself.

If the athlete uses sportsmanship correctly, he is greatly respected by his coach, teammates, and the fans. The sportsmanship which he has been taught by his coaches through the years not only makes him a respectable athlete, but also a respectable citizen of his town or community. Sportsmanship gives the athlete the ability to get along with people. This ability is extremely important since he will be involved with people for the rest of his life--good and bad people.

The effect sportsmanship has on an athlete is not only a useful tool to him during his days of youth when he is being trained but a needed quality which he will use long after his days as a player are finished. If sportsmanship is used properly by the athlete, he has succeeded not only in being an athlete but also in accepting manhood. When the time comes in which he must accept responsibilities; such as, the day when he gets to use Dad's car, he will not display the anger which is inside him by recklessly driving the car--if he has been trained properly in sportsmanship.

Sportsmanship will also help the athlete when he finally grows to manhood. While working under a despised boss, he will be able to get along with him and know how to go about approaching other people like him. The athlete, while playing in college or some other advanced sports, will be able to make friends and also be one of the crowd; yet not yield to everything the crowd demands. The boy trained as an athlete will uphold his principles regardless of any circumstance or any influence from others. From this training he has learned to make the distinction between right and wrong conduct and its effect on others and on his own reputation.

This boy built for an athlete is now a man of determination, quickness of mind, and with control of his emotions in all situations. He is a man respected by everyone in his community.

A LOVE NO LONGER

This, about to be compiled,
Is the heartbreaking tale
Of a love, full and true,
Which never intended to fail.

Mary was that darling girl's name
Who strove with all her might
To show her sweet darling the way
Through the darkness of night.

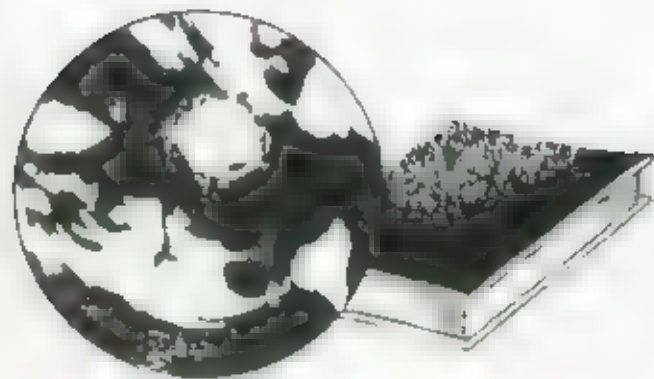

To her he returned the sweet love
Which she bestow'd on him
Always with deepest affection
Never pallid or grim.

One night he left her standing there
Wiping away her tears
The tears caused by his other love
They would remain for years.

He told her he could not marry
For his love had grown old
He said he's lost his affection
No longer was he bold.

That incident brought to a close
A love gone forever
It shall not ever come again
No, not again, never.

THOUGHTS

Did you ever go to a class
And take your seat among the rest
Sitting, watching, and listening attentively
Trying so hard to do your best.

When all of a sudden
There comes a stimulating thought
Which, unknown to your conscious self
Has so determinedly been sought.

Oh, so far away
It does carry you
Across the land, through the air
Over the ocean blue.

When finally you have arrived
At your long sought destination
With happiness and joy
You seem to have filled your obligation.

Then out of nowhere
Comes a sheepish cry
"Wake up, the bell has rung."
Well, that's one class gone by.

ACTIVITIES

Erskine Academy provides a dormitory for girls who live great distances from the school and who do not wish to commute daily.

This year seven girls occupy the second floor of the building which stands next to the academic building. The rooms are equipped with bunk beds, dressers and desks. A small kitchenette allows the girls to make bed time snacks of toast, cookies, or popcorn. Study hours are maintained each evening.

Life in the dormitory is an education in itself. Here the girls learn the value of friendships and responsibilities encountered away from home.

DORM RESIDENTS

Seven, that is all there are--
But, they, indeed, will all go far.

Jacky, in her merry way,
Keeps us laughing, jolly and gay.

Carolyn, a fine lady will be,
With her gentile manner, wait and see.

Penny never does sit still;
Did someone give her a jumping pill?

"Me, Peter Rabbit!" That's our Pat!
A wonder she ever knows where she's at!

Gail is rather fond of horses,
Think they're finer than her courses.

First to volunteer, that's Susan--
A future homemaker, the conclusion.

Sandy, often the studious one,
Thinks that text books are great fun.

Mrs. Starrett is head of these seven.
Patience will be her reward in heaven.

Wayne Thomas and Dewey Baker led winning scorers with 17 and 16 points respectively. Ken Robertson found weak spots in Erskine's defense and netted 23 for the home five. The Erskine JV's made the hard a sweep beating the Monmouth JV's 69-51 in the prelim.

Glee Club

This year Erskine is very proud of its Glee Club. There are quite a few new additions which give us a larger membership over last year's.

The Glee Club is split up into three groups: the freshmen and sophomores are in one group; the juniors and seniors are in the other group. Most important of all is the Special Glee Club, which is made up of all the classes and consist of the better singers. Some of the activities the Glee Club groups sang at were: Senior Play, Christmas Pageant, and Graduation.

Our thanks go to Mrs. Cates who has been with us now for three years and has done a wonderful job. She puts in a lot of time and effort to make it a very impressive club.

SEATED: E. Baker, S. Loder, C. Otis, F. Fisher, M. Haskell. STANDING, FIRST ROW: R. Mills, G. Cooper, P. Wilcox, W. Taber, A. Trask, F. Welch. SECOND ROW: C. Rippley, F. Waldron, Mr. Bowie.

Band

The band at Erskine though small shows a great deal of enthusiasm. Mr. Bowie, our director, has provided much entertainment this year.

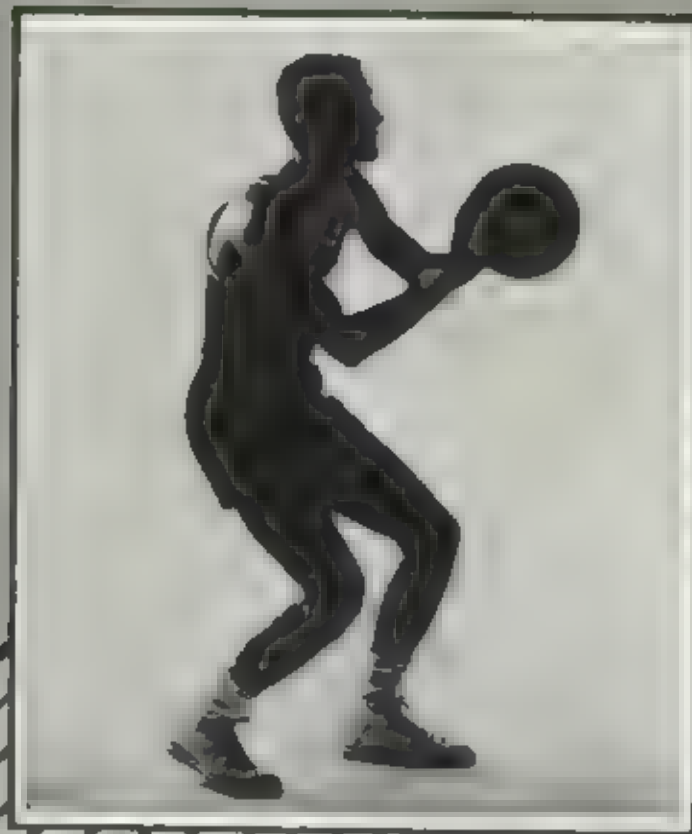

Majorettes

The majorettes have been working hard for the spring activities. Last year they were in the Spring Concert and also marched in the local parades.

This year they are looking forward to the Music Festival and Spring Concert. The majorettes are under the direction of Linda Hopkins and Gloria Collins.

Football 1964

We, the players of the 1964 Erskine Academy football team, wish to thank and show our deepest appreciation to our new coaches, Mr. John Plummer and Mr. George (Pete) Quirion. We are very grateful to both of these men for their unselfish time, patience and the effort that they gave us, so that we could have a team.

Our season ended with a 1-6 record, our only win being over Monmouth 7-0. Next year it is hoped our record will be somewhat different, and we wish the coaches and boys the best of luck.

Although the Varsity Girls didn't have as much success as we hoped for this year, winning only two games, they did keep their spirit up and tried their best.

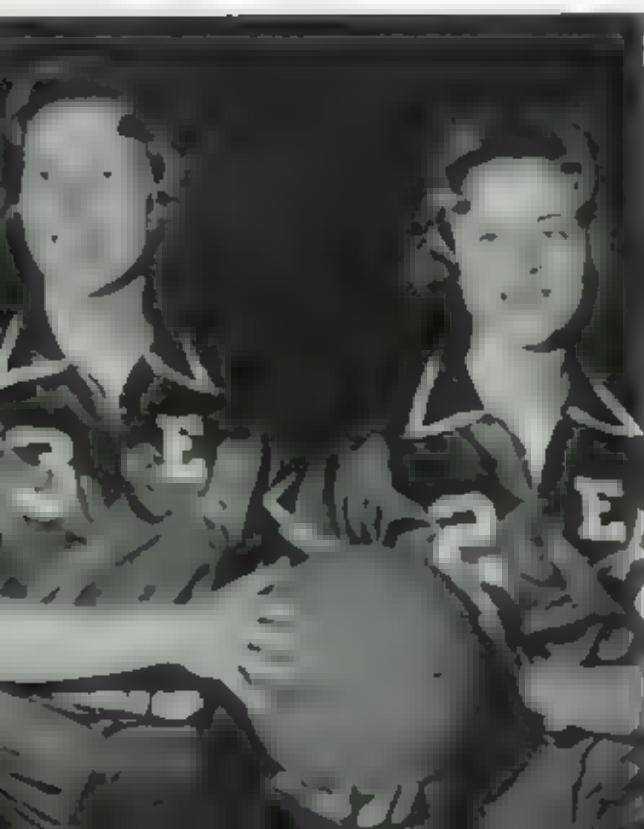

Our thanks go to all the parents who provided transportation to our away games and our special thanks to the managers who did a fine job and to Miss Erskine for her understanding and guidance.

Losing only three seniors at graduation, I believe that next year's team will have a good year. Best of luck to the coach and team.

WINTER TIME IN MAINE

Come to Maine in winter, for winter in Maine creates a mood of friendliness and good will. In this state in winter are many difficulties. The dropping of the thermometer causes cars to freeze and refuse to start. The snow piled high on the road causes accidents and paths covered knee deep with snow must be shoveled out. It is during these hardships in winter in this pine tree state that the love of mankind is shown. How quick Maine people are to help others in each time of hardship through all the long winter.

Perhaps it is the beauty of a Maine winter which inspires these people in their feeling of friendliness. Maine in its winter setting is a wonderland of beauty. One thinks first of the pine tree with its top frosted with clean white snow. Then the many fields with their blanket of fluffy snow, seem adorned with diamonds and sapphires, as the sun shines down upon the glistening white surface. In the distance the white capped mountains of Maine lend a beauty all the town. The snow covered trees, the distant mountains and gleaming housetops remind us of a Christmas card sprinkled with silver glitter.

To a sportsman Maine winter is a paradise of thrilling activities. One of her favorite sports is ice fishing with red flags bobbing up and down and the fish pulling hard through the ice on the mirrored surface of the frozen lake. Tobogganing and skiing with the stinging snow cutting your face and the beauty of the glistening snow dazzling your eyes give you hours of fun. After a strenuous day of activities, one, relaxed around the fireplace in the old Maine sea captain's house built long ago, talks over his day's experiences.

With all the opportunities Maine has to offer I wouldn't leave Maine for anywhere else in the world. I hope that Maine will remain beautiful and friendly forever and ever.

Albert Sproul

RULES FOR ERSKINE

The rules at Erskine are good rules in general. Most of the students do their best to follow them. The pupils who break these rules make the going hard for others. Although we all usually do our share of talking in class, we try to keep the noise in check. Throwing papers and candy on the floor in the hall doesn't leave a good impression of the students on the teachers. Any high school student should be able to discard his rubbish in a waste can. The litter in the halls makes our school very untidy.

Some students hold grudges against the teachers for enforcing the rules. These students do not realize that along with teaching us, it is part of the instructor's duty to keep us in order. No one should expect to come to school and get away with "murder."

I think the upperclassmen are doing a poor job of setting an example for the freshmen. The juniors and seniors are even worse than the sophomores. It has been reported that they crowd at the candy store.

All in all, I think we upperclassmen should try a lot harder to set wise examples for the freshmen.

We, the 1965 Senior Class of Erskine Academy, are leaving, never to enter Erskine's halls or classrooms again as students. Erskine has been the biggest part of our young lives thus far but--the future--what lies ahead? That question has many answers; for some it is unanswered. We have come to the crossroads, we must go our many different ways, leaving behind us our beloved Erskine, teachers, friends, and memories. "What we are to be, we are now becoming."
